Regulated cannabis industry voices support for compliance checks

Washington CannaBusiness Association fully supports compliance for a safe, quality-controlled marketplace

WASHINGTON – The Washington CannaBusiness Association, the only industry organization solely representing I-502 license holders, today released a statement supporting compliance checks conducted by Washington State’s Liquor and Cannabis Board. The Liquor and Cannabis Board today announced that four of 22 recreational stores recently failed compliance checks for sales of marijuana to minors.

“We applaud the Liquor and Cannabis Board for enforcing strict standards to support a safe, quality-controlled and regulated cannabis marketplace in Washington. These first compliance checks are instrumental in helping prevent the illegal sale of marijuana to minors,” said Washington CannaBusiness Association Executive Director Vicki Christophersen. “We look forward to continuing our shared commitment with state regulators and law enforcement to ensure that our new regulated marketplace adheres to the strict guidelines established by policymakers and voters.”
